Q.1 At the moment same-sex couples can get married or enter into a civil partnership but mixed-sex couples can only get married. In February 2017 the Court of Appeal in England ruled that the current situation cannot continue as it means couples are being treated differently. The government will now have to decide on the future for civil partnerships. Some people believe the government should now make civil partnerships available to all; others think they should be removed completely so that marriage is the only option. Thinking about the future of civil partnerships, which of the following do you think should happen?
